Ben-Gurion Warns Arabs: 'Danger of War' in Middle East

Tension High; Knesset Told Israel Ready

JERUSALEM (Special) —
TENSION REMAINS high in the Middle East despite the uneasy calm on the Israel-Syria border.

Prime Minister Ben-Gurion warned Israel's Arab neighbors this week that there is "danger of war." He told the Knesset (Parliament): "Instructions have been given to the army how to behave. If the position grows more serious we shall issue other instructions."

Added to the tempest created by Syria's assault last week at Gonen was news that Egypt has delivered British-made Vampire jet aircraft to Saudi Arabia pursuant to an agreement of a year ago. Egypt agreed then to deliver the Vampires when a certain number of Soviet MIGs arrived in Egypt.

ACCORDING TO State Department officials, this country was aware of this agreement when we agreed to send jet trainer pilots to Saudi Arabia.

It is feared by many qualified sources that unless the United States takes definite and open steps to deliver similar arms to Israel, the Arab nations of Egypt, Syria and Saudi Arabia may take some offensive action to carry out their threat to close Aqaba and the Straits of Tiran to Israeli shipping.

IT IS recognized that this delivery of offensive aircraft to Saudi Arabia is in line with the desperate attempts by Syria and Egypt to prevent a peace in the Middle East.

Until this week, it appeared as though Saudi Arabia was solidly aligned with the pro-Western countries and that the Administration's red carpet treatment of King Saud when he came here was paying off. Now there is growing concern that the persistent wooing and cajoling of the Arabian monarch as a great Arab leader by Egypt and Syria may lure him to the danger of Soviet infiltration into his kingdom and draw him away from the West.

US Investors to Build Housing In Israel

WASHINGTON, D.C. (NJP)—A group of American builders and private investors was formed this week to launch building of housing in Israel in the immediate future.

Philip Klutznick, B'nai B'rith president, organized the group. The POST learned, which met with Israeli Finance Minister Levi Eshkol in New York early this month.

Klutznick, former Federal Housing Administrator, and an authority on urban development, left this week for a two-week tour of Israel. He will confer with Israeli leaders on the nation's housing and development needs.

ISRAEL AGREES TO UN OUTPOSTS

JERUSALEM (Special)—Israel has agreed to UN outposts along the Syria-Israel border, it was learned here this week.

This is a change in Israel's policy, which had banned UN observation of Israel land, especially in the Gaza area. The agreement between Israel and the UN was effected after the July 9 border clash between Syria and Israel.

House Committee OK's Aid to Israel

By LILLIAN LEVY

Washington Bureau Chief

WASHINGTON, D.C. (NJP)—Despite the tendency of the 85th Congress to cut foreign aid appropriations, the House Committee on Foreign Affairs has recommended increased aid to Israel (NJP, July 7), because of the recent tremendous increase of immigration there.

In its report on the Mutual Security Act for 1958, the powerful Congressional committee took note of the fact that "our aid program to Israel has helped that country to expand its industrial and agricultural output, and to meet the cost of resettling refugees who have found a haven there."

Dulles Plays Down Arab-Israel Dispute

WASHINGTON (NJP)—SECRETARY DULLES minimized recent flareups of Arab-Israel tensions at his press conference this week.

The Secretary said in reply to a question by The POST regarding the prudence of continuing U. S. shipments of arms and jet trainer pilots to Saudi Arabia and other Arab states who publicly declare opposition to any Middle East peace settlement, that he didn't believe recent developments would lead us to change arrangements made when King Saud was here.

HE EXPRESSED some concern, however, over delivery by Egypt of British Vampire jets to Saudi Arabia and said this deserves and is receiving consideration.

Dulles noted Saudi insistence that Aqaba encompasses territorial waters and declared emphatically that this is not the view of U.S. which holds they are international waters with right of free and innocent passage to all ships.

As to whether the U. S. would lead in effecting Middle East peace, Dulles stated other nations might be able to play more productive role in doing this because the Eisenhower Doctrine made the U. S. presence felt more in area. He refused to specify which nations.

I THINK AS I PLEASE

More US 'Interference' Is Needed By Israel

By CARL ALPERT

HAIFA—A distinguished American Jewish leader, noted far and wide for his generous contribution of time, money and energy for Israel stepped off his plane at Lydda Airport not long ago and declared, as quoted in the press: "Those who wish to take part in the political life of Israel should come here and become Israeli citizens; Jews outside Israel have no right to interfere in its internal affairs."

Alpert

THE FIRST PART of this statement will have the full approval of all. Jews who do not live in Israel have no right to run for political office, have no right to vote, and have no business meddling in any aspect of political affairs. The second part of the statement, however, which seems to follow so glibly, is by no means true.

There is constant attempt to influence the growth, development and direction of Israel. The large sums of money contributed in the United States for the support of the Histadrut are intended to strengthen the labor elements of the country's economy. Private capital which is invested in Israel seeks to promote conditions and an atmosphere which will permit industry to flourish. Friends of the Hebrew University, of the Technion and of Bar Ilan University, among others, are constantly affecting the future of the country by their activity. The word "interfere" is merely an extreme and colorful way of referring to participation in internal affairs of Israel.

THERE IS ONLY ONE THING WRONG with such participation; there is not enough of it. American tourists and American investors are much too kind to this country for its own good. They are too prone to excuse and forgive faults which should not exist. "After all," the benevolent American visitor says when he is disturbed by flies in a public restaurant, "the country is only 10 years old. We should not expect too much."

He is wrong. He should expect more and demand more. If screens have been put up in hotel rooms, and in some restaurants, it is only because tourists have "interfered."

If there are delays, inefficiencies, inaccuracies or impoliteness, they can not be justified on any grounds, and the stronger and louder the complaints the sooner something will be done to improve matters. Those who think that it is sacrilegious and anti-Zionist to criticize Israel are rendering a grave disservice to the country. If there is anything this country needs it is constructive criticism—and it is not getting enough. There is a growing tendency to think that Israel and its leaders can do no wrong—and that leads down to the road to destruction.

AMERICAN JEWS have made major contributions to the stability of America's economy, and though they have contributed millions of dollars freely to Israel they have done almost nothing to influence the development of a healthy economy in that state. In Israel today labor has the bit in its teeth and is demanding more and ever more in the form of wages, benefits, premiums, bonuses and other compensation.

A courageous member of the Israel Supreme Court has warned that "any increase the workman gets will be swallowed up in higher cost of the goods he needs must buy. Our political leaders know this too, but they are not bold enough to stand out against popular demand. They throw up their hands and help the very inflation they were elected to fight."

Inevitably Israel industry, with a rising wage spiral, is pricing itself out of the competitive foreign market, and playing havoc with its export possibilities. So what? The rich American Jews will meet the deficits and continue to pour their contributions in to keep the wheels turning.

WITH ALL THEIR GENEROSITY and all their kindness, and all their love of Israel, American Jews have committed the sin of abandoning a young and inexperienced country to its own devices. After 10 years of trial and error the state of Israel has magnificent achievements to show, but how much more progress might have been made, how many of the present serious fiscal and economical problems might have been avoided if the leaders of American Jewry had been more critical, more demanding, more paternal.

Financial assistance rendered to Israel by the United States government is supervised by technical and economic experts who see to it that the funds are properly used and not squandered out of ignorance. It is about time that American Jews begin to give serious thought to similar supervision of the vaster sums which they hand over so freely and unselfishly. Israel's welfare demands such interest.

Three Motels Refuse Lodgings to Rabbi

MIAMI, Fla. (NJP)—A Miami rabbi got the "cold shoulder" from three motels in the thick of the tourist belt here, it was reported this week by the Jewish Floridian.

Rabbi Yaakov Rosenberg, spiritual leader of Beth David Synagogue, one of the South's largest Conservative temples, encountered the rebuffs when he was invited to Pompano Beach for consultation by the 45 Jewish families there, who were trying to start their own congregation.

THE RABBI, his wife and two children, drove to Pompano Beach, 35 miles north of Miami and nine miles north of Ft. Lauderdale.

The rabbi spotted one motel that had a "restricted" sign. Adjacent to it was another motel, where the family stopped. While being taken to a cabin, the rabbi said, he asked the owner if he shared his neighbor's sentiments about Jews, adding "I am a rabbi."

Rabbi Rosenberg said the owner looked at him in confusion, and said "You are an honest man." He added he had nothing against Jews, but "it is the policy of the area." The owner apologized profusely, saying—you guessed it—"Some of my best friends are Jews."

At another motel—the Briney Breakers—Rabbi Rosenberg said "We were escorted to our cabin, began unpacking and getting settled. I then went to the office to register." At this point, a woman asked if he were Jewish. "My husband thought you weren't. I decided I'd better ask," the woman said. "I'm sorry, but we can't register you. It's the policy of the association." Rabbi Rosenberg told the Jewish Floridian he didn't ask which association it was. He merely returned to his cabin, and got ready to leave.

THE WOMAN came to his cabin to apologize. "I'm not the owner," she said. "I'm only managing the motel for the owner, who is away. I am a Christian, and I can't send you away. It's not a Christian thing to do."

Rabbi Rosenberg said he did not want to embarrass her—he had come to Pompano Beach to speak to the Jewish community. "Well, you needn't tell anyone you stayed here," she said. "You can register under another name." The rabbi declined.

Catholic Night Watchman Is an Ardent 'Guardian of Israel'

By JANICE KAPLAN

CLEVELAND, O. (NJP)—From his modest lodging on Cleveland's Southeast Side, a balding, rosy-faced little man goes quietly forth five nights a week and checks in at his job as night watchman at General Electric—perhaps an unusual spot in which to find an ardent Guardian of Israel.

He might not recognize a mezuza if he saw one—and he may not pronounce "Mogen David" correctly; but he is one of this city's most passionate supporters of the Jewish state—and he even has scars to prove it.

HE IS John Joseph Antozzy, 51; a Slovenian by descent and a Roman Catholic by faith. A bachelor, he lives simply, and spends little on himself.

But since the Siani campaign last October, he has purchased Bonds for Israel to the tune of $9,000!

"I LOVE the Jewish people," says Mr. Antozzy quietly. "I don't think the world can get along without them. And that's why I want to do everything possible to help them build their state. I wish more of my own people felt this way."

The story of Mr. Antozzy's friendly feelings towards Jews in general probably begins when he was growing up in a Jewish neighborhood, and, as he says,

When Nature "forgets"...remember

EX-LAX

THE CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE
Ex-Lax tastes like delicious chocolate, brings relief gently and thoroughly. Buy the New 75c Size. Save as much as 45c. Also available in 35c and 15c sizes.

"got to know them well." But his devotion to the State of Israel actually started last fall when he was driving to work one day and, on his car radio, heard an appeal broadcast by Mrs. Julie Kravitz, then chairman of the Women's Division of the Bonds Organization here.

"I HAD never been so moved by anything in my life," he admits. "I called Mrs. Kravitz and asked her for some more information. Next time there was a Bonds for Israel meeting I was there—and made my first pledge."

Somewhere around that time, Mr. Antozzy also heard televised broadcasts on Israel by such persons as Ed Murrow and Israeli Prime Minister Ben-Gurion. That clinched it.

Encouraged by frequent conversations with Mrs. Kravitz, he began to study the Middle East situation carefully—and much of his spare time is spent on reading up on the Israel situation.

"More than ever I became convinced that I was supporting a good cause," he states. "I kept on buying bonds."

The mild, soft-voiced Antozzy soon became a familiar figure at Israel Bonds affairs. Even when he could not attend in person, he would come to the Bonds office here to deliver his pledge—often a collection of $5 bills—of singles—of a few $10s—of pennies, nickels and dimes, even...making up a laboriously gathered total of $500 or $1,000.

And not only with his money but with the sword of his voice, is Mr. Antozzy ready to defend the State of Israel. Not long ago, at a neighborhood bar, a couple of guys accosted him.

"YOU'RE NO Jew," they began. "Why don't you buy U.S. Bonds instead of Israel Bonds?"

"I do buy U.S. Bonds," Antozzy told them, "but I buy Israel Bonds too, because they're all the same. If Israel falls, we do too."

The guys didn't agree (this was in a tavern, remember) and a scuffle broke out. There were two of them, but Antozzy is no coward. He saw lots of action in the Pacific with the 77th Infantry—and he hadn't forgotten how to fight for a good cause. The guys left.

And John Joseph Antozzy proudly shows you the scar on his hand—a memento of the encounter. "It was worth it," he chuckles.

There is another reason for Mr. Antozzy's devotion to the Jewish State—symbolized through two of Cleveland's religious leaders, Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver and Rabbi Barnett R. Brickner, both of whom he admires greatly.

So when it was announced that the Annual Guardians Dinner here (entrance via a $1,000 Bond) was to be held in honor of Rabbi Brickner, Antozzy hurried up with his money—again a collection of small bills and change.

"But I don't think I'll be able to attend," he told Mrs. Kravitz sorrowfully. "I have to work that night—and I'm afraid to ask my boss for the night off."

For the Same Cause

John J. Antozzy, Roman Catholic night watchman, who has bought $9,000 worth of Israel Bonds since the Sinai campaign, is greeted by Rabbi Barnett R. Brickner (left) at a Guardians dinner honoring the Reform spiritual leader. Attorney Edward Ginsberg, dinner chairman, is at right.

So maybe you can give the ticket to someone else."

But tiny, dynamic Marie Kravitz isn't a Woman of Valor for nothing. She immediately called Antozzy's boss at G-E, told him the story, and received full permission for him to take off the evening.

IT WAS a great affair—and Mr. Antozzy whispered another $1,000 pledge as, with shining eyes, he watched Rabbi Brickner receive honor from guest speakers Dr. Lincoln Bell Hale, and Dr. James Heller...and from the Cleveland Jewish community.

And then suddenly the spotlight turned on him! Mrs. Kravitz and The POST correspondent had brought Rabbi Brickner's attention to this faithful follower. And suddenly there was John Joseph Antozzy, a Slovenian by descent, a Roman Catholic, and a night watchman, up at the speaker's table—at the microphone—shaking hands with his hero, and telling the assembled several hundred guests just what was in his heart.

"THE JEWISH people have built up the world and faith," he said, his voice trembling a little—his round face rosier than ever with the unexpected attention. "I'm ashamed of all the persecution they've had to suffer from my kind of people."

"But buying Bonds for Israel is kind of a way of making up for it all."

And some day, declares Mr. Antozzy, he's going to Israel himself. He says that will be the happiest day of his life.

Liz, Mike Won't Talk About 'Jewish' Wedding

By RON WORMALD

NEW YORK (NJP)—The question "did Mike Todd and Elizabeth Taylor have a Jewish wedding ceremony at some time after they exchanged civil vows last February in Mexico?" remains unanswered. The two persons involved made it clear to The POST that until such a time as they make such an announcement, if ever they do, the subject is closed as far as the public is concerned.

MIKE AND LIZ arrived back in the United States aboard the French Line's Liberte after a three-month stay in Europe. Todd, usually boisterous and ready to talk, appeared for once subdued and more like the average expectant father. He made a heroic effort to leave most of the talking to his wife.

When The POST asked about the rumors of a Jewish wedding, however, he took over the conversational reins. Quietly, yet firmly, he stated that such matters were something between him and his wife. He said they are personal and not for public discussion.

The POST called a friend of Todd's, who said an answer would have to come from either Todd or his wife. The friend admits to knowing most of what goes on between the couple, but would not commit himself in the matter.

He said that he went along with Todd's reply to the question. It is their own personal affair, and theirs alone.

Miss Taylor went directly from the liner to a New York hospital for a medical examination. The child is expected some time in October.

It's Hildy Ellis Now, But Natural Mother Still Fights

By REVV BALKIN

MIAMI, Fla. (NJP) — Hildy McCoy officially became Hildy Ellis this week, but the five-year legal battle centered on the Catholic child adopted by Jew-

'DOPTED NOW: HILDY HAPPY

MIAMI, Fla. (NJP)—WHAT DOES a little six-year-old freckled face girl know about religion?

A prayer before meals... a prayer at bed time... a love of God... and that's it.

Hildy Ellis, now the legal daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Ellis, will be given the opportunity by her parents to make her own decision when she is knowledgeable age.

Circuit Judge John W. Prunty decreed this week that love is more important than religion.

HILDY KNEW this all along.

When The POST reporter showed Hildy a family picture published on the front page of The POST, Hildy cried out with joy: "That's my mother, and that's my daddy!"

Hildy leaned over and kissed the picture.

"You know, Hildy told The POST, "I'm 'dopted now. My mother says I'm going to get a diploma with a pink ribbon which says so."

ish parents might not yet be in its final chapter.

Judge John Prunty decreed here that Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Ellis are "fit and proper persons to adopt

Hildy McCoy, and she is hereby declared legally the child of petitioners subject to all obligations of a child born to such parents

Prunty in lawful wedlock. She shall hereafter be known as Hildy Ellis."

The hearing, which had been expected to end the five-year legal fight, now appeared to be just another round. Attorney John J. Sullivan of Boston, representing Hildy's natural mother, Marjorie McCoy Dougherty, hinted he would probably appeal "right up to the Supreme Court." He told The POST Mrs. Dougherty "never would give up."

Mrs. Dougherty did not appear in court although it was reported that she was in Miami.

Judge Prunty emphasized that the religious question was an important one in this case.

At one time during the court hearing, he spoke directly to the Ellises and asked:

"Would you be willing for Hildy to make her own decision about religion when she is old enough?"

Ellis answered "Yes."

"Even if it is different from your own?" the judge queried. Again Ellis answered "Yes."

In an exclusive interview in The POST (May 31) the Ellises told this reporter that they would permit Hildy to make her own choice when she is old enough to understand.

AARON BARKEN, attorney for the State Welfare Board, told The POST that, "even if the case was appealed to the United States Supreme Court there would be little likelihood of a reversal."

Barken pointed out that "after a child has reached the age of one and the parents are found suitable—no doctor, psychologist, or welfare worker would approve of removing a child from a happy home."

ISRAEL, DETROIT SHIPPING LINKED

DETROIT (NJP)—This city and Israel were linked for the first time last week when a Norwegian ship took on a cargo here destined for Tel Aviv. The ship, the Askholm, loaded up with steel, automobiles and plastics. The Askholm has been chartered by the new Israel American lines, and will conduct monthly service to Detroit and other United States ports.

Jerusalem Council Exits in Huff Over Reform Issue

JERUSALEM (NJP)—Members of the city council here walked out on a meeting of that body after Mayor Gershon Agron denied requests for immediate debate on construction of a Reform temple.

The dissenting members included what is known as the religious bloc and the Herut.

The Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion is building a chapel in its new archaeological school here.

Orthodox groups opposed the plan, which led to the dissolution of the Orthodox-Labor coalition in the Municipal council.

Jewish Leader Jailed In Syria Shootings

DAMASCUS (Special)—The vice-president of the Damascus Jewish Community Council was arrested and charged with the shooting of two Syrian citizens in the Jewish quarter of the city. Ishak Ezra Sassoon was quoted by the Lebanese paper Raquib Al-Ahwal as saying he thought the two men he attacked were fedayeen. One of the men has died. About 500 Jews are left in Damascus of a population that once was 25,000.

Israel Vaccine to Europe

JERUSALEM (NJP)—Israel has shipped Salk vaccine to Hungary and Rumania to aid in checking a polio outbreak there. About 3,000 units were involved.

By N. PEARLROTH

DEAR MR. PEARLROTH: I would be interested in knowing the origin of my maiden name. My father was born in a small town in Galicia or Austria, as it was then called. The town was called Rymanow. The name is Alter. — BELLE ALTER SKOLNICK.

ALTER (The Ancient One) was originally a given name bestowed on children in the belief that it would assure them of longevity. Even when a person already had a name, they sometimes would supplant it by "Alter," especially in case of sickness. All given names eventually grew into family names. Galician family names came into being in 1789. It is probable that your family in choosing a name availed themselves of an ancestral good luck name. In exceptional cases "Alter" is a translation of the Spanish Senior (Elder) but the latter name often is garbled into Schneier in Yiddish.

DEAR MR. PEARLROTH: Please tell me the origin of the name (pronounced) Ryegrodsky. I believe it was spelled Riigrodsky. My father comes from Trostiany near Bialystok. Now he goes by Grodsky. — MRS. SOPHIA GOLDBERG, Pittsburgh 17, Pennsylvania.

RAJGRODSKY (that would be the original spelling) is a family name of geographical origin. It is derived from the name of the town of Rajgrad (Paradise City) in the district of Szczuczyn on the highway from Warsaw to Kovno. The town was predominantly Jewish, but it is not known why it had such a happy name, except that it was located on a peninsula in a lake. Russian Jews adopted permanent family names for the first time in 1804. At the time your ancestors commemorated the town of their origin.

CONTROVERSY CONTINUES DESPITE ASCH'S DEATH

(See letter in "Freedom of the Press" section)

NEW YORK (NJP) — Sholem Asch, world-famed Jewish writer, was mourned this week following his death in London at the age of 76. Asch was the center of controversy in recent years over his Biblical novels based on the New Testament.

A naturalized American citizen, Asch left the United States in 1953 to live in England, declaring he was "heartbroken" over the criticism by American Jewry of "The Nazarene," "The Apostle," and "Mary," novels about Jesus, Paul and Mary.

Last year Asch moved to Israel, and later said he was sorry he hadn't gone there when he was younger. He had been a Zionist for many years. He was visiting his daughter in London when he died, shortly after speaking for the Friends of the Hebrew University.

Born in Poland, Asch was a Talmudic scholar in his youth. He wrote his first novel in Hebrew, and subsequently wrote in Yiddish. He was noted for his sympathetic treatment of the poor and oppressed and for the scope, humanity and descriptive power of his writing.

Among his most famous Jewish works were "Three Cities," "Mottke the Thief," "The War Goes On," and "Song of the Valley." In 1945 he wrote "East River."

His rewriting of the New Testament drew sharp rebuke from United States Jewish critics who said he was an "apostate." Asch defended his work by saying he considered Judaism and Christianity "one culture and one civilization," and that he had attempted to show their homogeneity.

Humphrey Scores US Policy

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NJP) — Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.), scored the administration's Middle East policy last week as one "characterized by ambivalence, vacillation, and expediency."

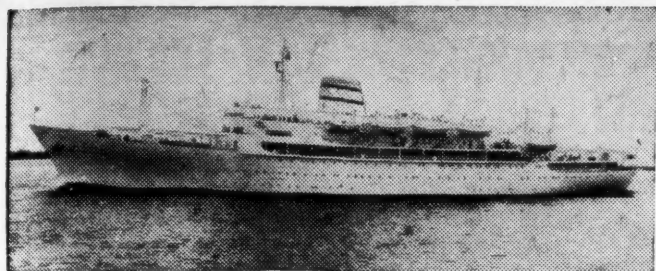

Humphrey charged the administration approach has been one that "encouraged opposite suppositions" to the following assumptions he recommended as the basis of our Middle East policy:

- 1—That Israel is an integral part of the region and is there to stay.
- 2—That the 1949 armistice boundaries constitute inviolable political boundaries subject to change only by the joint agreement of the states concerned.
- 3—That resettlement in Arab lands with compensation for property left in Israel, is in fact the only effective and realistic way of solving the Arab-refugee problem.
- 4—That the stability and security of the region demands an early settlement of the Arab-Israel conflict.

ISRAEL MAPS EXPANDED PASSENGER LINE SERVICE

By LEO HEIMAN

JERUSALEM (NJP) — Israel is going to cut in on the tough international passenger-carrying traffic. Surveys carried out recently by the Zim-Shoham combine, Israel's largest shipowners, point the way to this move.

BIGGEST maritime money-makers are the oil tankers, followed by super-freighters, cargo liners, etc. Even coasters and small refrigerated ships make more money than passenger liners. In fact, the more luxurious a passenger liner is the less money it makes, and some top liners, famous all over the world, are notorious floating deficit-makers, kept in service only because of their intrinsic publicity-prestige value.

For Israel, passenger ships are not only a matter of national pride, prestige, publicity and goodwill, but also of security and economy. Middle Eastern politics being what they are, ships of foreign nations are forbidden to call at Haifa during any hostilities or acute crises. The few shipowners that do send their vessels to Israel demand exorbitant prices, all kinds of war bonuses, danger payments, etc.

In any emergency Israel can rely on her own ships, and since new immigrants and returning Israelis must be brought in even faster during emergencies to boost our slender manpower reserves, it is clear that fast passenger ships are a "must" for our merchant marine.

Economically, our passenger liners have never been deficit-makers, thanks mostly to all kinds of currency restrictions (which made only payment in Israeli pounds legal), government subsidies, and large-scale migration to (and from) Israel.

Simultaneous trebling of Zim-Shoham's and El Al Airlines' passenger capacity, however, gave a new twist to Israel's passenger traffic problems. The four Israeli luxury liners (Zion, Israel, Herzl and Jerusalem)—two other passenger ships—Artzah and Aliyah—are reserved for migration traffic) can carry about 2,000 passengers to Europe and America (or back) in a single month, with 55 crew or service personnel per each 100 passengers.

AT THE SAME time four Britannia airliners can, in one month, carry over 4,000 passengers to Europe and America (or

300 Barrels a Day

JERUSALEM (NJP) — The new oil field, Bror Chayil Number Two, is producing 300 barrels a day, or more than 20 times the daily average of the 16 Helez wells it is reported, way of getting out of the deficit morass in which most passenger ships get bogged down sooner or later, is to build newer, better and more economical passenger liners.

GERMAN reparations are a golden opportunity to get at least two or three new passenger liners built—not merely in age but also in conception.

New ships must have a speed of at least 24 knots (present Israeli liner speed—18 knots) to cut down on traveling time and expenses. To attain such speed without installing heavier machines (thus commencing a vicious circle, for heavier engines need more fuel, more fuel needs more space, more space means a bigger ship, etc.), the new ships must be entirely streamlined, and longer and narrower than the present ones. New stabilizers must be fitted for greater stability and elimination of any cargo holds and cargo-lifting machinery would decrease both weight and space.

The ships must be one-tourist class liners, with two and four-berth cabins which the passengers must keep clean and tidy themselves. The passengers also have to make their own beds and get their own meals cafeteria style. There would be one single dining room for all and one single kitchen for both passengers and crew. Passenger luggage would be handled automatically by conveyor belts and all this would eliminate more than three quarters of the service personnel, making the ship much cheaper to run. The cabins presently taken by service personnel would be taken by passengers and the resulting savings would enable the shipowners to reduce fares to about 40 per cent of what an airliner ticket would cost.

On such terms, Israeli passenger liners may be able to compete even with world's top passenger shipping interests. The new proposals are now being studied by Zim-Shoham.

back) with only five crew and service personnel per each 100 passengers. Since plane journeys are 10 times as fast (including stopovers) as ship sailings, and since the price for plane tickets and first-class passenger ship berths is almost the same, the majority of passengers tend to prefer air travel pure and simple.

Passenger ships thus start not only with the initial disadvantage of being 10 times slower and 10 times less efficient than passenger aircraft, but also with the disadvantage of being extremely costly to the shipowners.

Since Israel must maintain maritime passenger services to Europe and America, the best

Israel Has Great Cultural Future, US Patron Sam Rubin Declares

By NADIA LOURIE

TEL AVIV (NJP) — One of America's leading contributors to Israel's cultural and general development sees the young state as "an active working laboratory because of its manifold immigration from all corners of the world.

SAM RUBIN, president of the America-Israel Cultural Foundation, expressed that opinion while in Israel to aid in laying the cornerstone for the Rubin Academy of Music in Jerusalem. Rubin sponsored the academy through the Foundation, donating the entire $325,000 needed to buy the building and make structural changes. The Jerusalem municipality contributed the equipment.

Rubin told The POST the fusion of many cultures is more concentrated, intensive and unique in Israel than it was in the early years of the United States, because the latter country was so much bigger.

Israel is bound to produce in time its own special pattern of life and culture, Rubin thinks. He believes that with all its energy and endeavor and the "incomparable creativity" of its young, Israel will emerge one day as one of the most modern and highly developed states in the world. He thinks it will act as a "catalyst" for the growth and development of the whole Middle East.

DYNAMIC, HANDSOME and youthful, Rubin, president of the world-wide Faberge Perfume company, unlike many patrons of the arts, is himself an extremely cultured and talented individual.

He began life as a would-be concert violinist, studying music quite seriously until he was 20. Then he heard Jascha Heifetz play, he says, and was so impressed with the effortless brilliance of the artist that he decided to put away his violin and go into business. Rubin describes himself also as a "frustrated painter."

He says he chose the perfume business because perfume making is an "artistic expression." He said he entered the perfume business through package-designing, which he took up first.

But no single activity could capture the adventurous spirit and boundless energy of this remarkable man. He has endowed many university chairs, was one of the founders of the New York University-Bellevue Medical Centre, an important supporter of the Fordham Hospital and the provider of its medical library, and the donor of the five-story building, housing the post-graduate center for Psychotherapy. In addition to many other public activities, he has been the national chairman of the United Jewish Appeal Emergency Rescue Fund.

CONCERTS SEEM to have played a decisive part in Rubin's life, for it was after hearing the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra in New York, during its last American trip in 1951 that he decided to participate in the American Fund for Israel Institutions — which was the predecessor of the America-Israel Cultural Foundation.

Today, in addition to strengthening the "cultural interchange between Israel and other countries and the sending abroad of Israel artists, musicians and exhibitions, he is also concerned with the provision of scholarships for an exchange of students between Israel and other countries. He even envisages an exchange with Arab countries which he firmly believes will have to come about "perhaps in not too distant future." His own son, Reed, at present at Yale University, spent a year in a Kibbutz in Israel after finishing school.

Rubin discussed with Prime Minister Ben-Gurion ways of helping to fill the essential needs of the new immigrants, which will also be one of the Foundation's main concerns, as well as the sponsoring of cultural centers in border settlements — a need greatly felt in those outlying places.

In Israel as in America, Rubin, in addition to his cultural activities, is also interested in several medical projects. Chief among these is cancer detection. The government hospital in Haifa in the last three or four years (since Rubin's interest in it) has also launched a cancer detection clinic.

ON THIS TRIP, he has decided to extend this service to six other government hospitals, where in addition to cancer detection, research facilities in the field of cancer will also be provided. The Strang Cancer Detection Clinic in New York will serve as a model for these, while the Haifa Government Hospital will remain the headquarters for this work. Maintenance alone of these six hospitals will probably cost $10,000 per year.

In addition, Rubin sponsored the building and equipment of the ultra-modern $50,000 cardiac section of the famous Beilinson Hospital near Tel Aviv.

'MISS ISRAEL' FLUSTERS PHOTOGRAPH; HE'S STUCK WITH ASSIGNMENT

NEW YORK (NJP)—AN OVER-EAGER cameraman for a Jewish organization who met Arata Barzely, Miss Israel, at Idlewild Airport, became so engrossed in his work he either did not hear or disregarded instructions given newsmen last week by a Public Health official.

Passengers on foreign flights into this country require certificates of vaccination before gaining admittance. Persons meeting in-coming passengers are forbidden to have close physical contact with them until vaccination requirements have been met.

This photographer, name unknown, entered the lane set aside for persons who are to be vaccinated, and preceeded Miss Israel down the lane. He went a step too far, however.

DIRECTLY IN FRONT of the Public Health building in the airport terminal he began focusing his camera for a final picture. Public health officials spotted him and hustled him inside the building.

When next seen he was nursing a spot high on his arm and complaining loudly that he had been innoculated.

Arab Refugees' Bid For Settlement With Israel Is Reported

WASHINGTON, D.C. (NJP)—The so-called Arab refugees, acting without the approval of the Arab states, are negotiating with Israel for a settlement of the refugee problem, it was reported unofficially from Jerusalem this week.

The Arab refugees, rather than the Arab states who attempt to speak for them, are increasingly amenable to a resettlement that will give them status in other Arab states and will include compensation by Israel for their losses.

SUCH A resettlement would be greatly dependent upon an active revival of the Johnston plan for use of the waters of the Jordan land reclamation and irrigation that would be of tremendous benefit to Jordan, Lebanon and Israel.

At his last week's press conference, Secretary Dulles, replying to a question by The POST, disclosed that the Administration favors "a revival of a plan for putting the waters of Jordan to use both in Israel and in Jordan." Observers attach significance to the fact that Dulles did not include mention of Syria in this statement and interpret this to mean that an attempt may be made to go ahead without Syria.

THE PRO-WESTERN turn taken by Jordan as well as Saudi-Arabia, Iraq, and Lebanon, would seem to provide an opportunity to really work out a settlement of the Arab-refugee problem that would include eventual resettlement in the lower Jordan valley upon completion of even a limited Johnston plan. This would also provide work for a vast number of the refugees.

Only Egypt and Syria would gain politically by preventing this resettlement. The tremendous blow to the prestige and influence of these two countries among the Arab states that would result could well mean Nasser's downfall and a revolt within Syria. And this presents a real danger to the uneasy peace now in the Middle East.

BRISCOE MAY 'BLANKET' US

CHICAGO (NJP)—Robert Briscoe, Dublin's former Lord Mayor, may extend his blanket business to Chicago.

Briscoe wrote a postcard, just after losing his Mayor's berth in a draw from a hat, to an Irish detective, Gerald McCarthy, whom he had met on his successful tour of the United States for the United Jewish Appeal.

The card said: "Gerald, as you may have read, I am no longer Lord Mayor, so as per our chat while visiting Chicago, I am asking if you will be able to assist me in obtaining a business in your charming city. I hope you liked the Irish blanket. Can you get me some orders?" The card was signed "Ex-Lord Mayor Briscoe."

Sholem Asch Wronged By Jews, Rabbi Declares

• Editor, Jewish POST and OPINION:

The sad news of the death of Sholem Asch leads me to write you this letter in the hope that I may be able to do something to right the wrong which has been done to this wonderful man.

Sholem Asch, who was probably the greatest Jewish writer of our time, has proved with his book, "The Prophet," that he was right in line with the best thinking of Liberal Judaism in our time. He did not rise to fame only with the publication of his book, "The Nazarene," in 1939, but was already by that time known to the Jewish world for a long list of great works which included "Three Cities," "Salvation" and "The Mother."

THE ALLEGED pre-occupation with the Christian theme was not new in Sholem Asch nor novel in Judaism in our time. There has been, in the last century, a great rise in the works of the theme of the beginnings of Christianity. Many books in Hebrew and Yiddish and other languages by many authors dealt with this theme. Notably, the great works by Dr. Joseph Klausner, professor at the Hebrew University, and Jewish artists such as Israel, Shagal and Anatolsky and the great sculptor Epstein can be cited as having used the theme of Jesus and Christianity. Among great American Jews who defended Sholem Asch and gloried in reminding Christianity that it originates from Judaism were the late Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Albert Einstein as well as Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, who is today one of America's leading spokesmen for Judaism.

In a defense against some of his attackers back in 1940, Sholem Asch wrote that "It is not true that I have made a God out of Jesus and certainly not a God's son. What I did say was to make him a Jew, which he was. He was born a Jew, he lived as a Jew and died as a Jewish martyr."

IN "THE APOSTLE" Asch attempts to prove that it was only 16 or 20 years after Jesus' death that Paul was able to succeed in declaring Jesus as God and the Son of God among his disciples.

The fierce attack on Sholem Asch and his books, "The Nazarene," "The Apostle" and "Martyr," was completely unjustified, especially from the viewpoint of Liberal Judaism with which Sholem Asch had associated himself for the past 20 years. It is one thing to say that Sholem Asch was not an Orthodox Jew but quite another to say that either he or his works were "un-Jewish."

To a great extent we can attribute to Sholem Asch a newer and friendlier relationship between Christianity and Judaism for the past generation. The fact that the common origins of both religions are so widely known is largely due to the popularity of Mr. Asch's books which are steeped in the finest Jewish tradition and which show no unfairness either to Judaism or to Christianity.

Ritual Here To Stay, Reader Says

• Editor, Jewish POST and OPINION:

I WAS very much distressed to read the statement of Dr. Robert MacIver about too much ritual in Jewish life in America. How much is too much?

And why confine the statement to Jews in the United States? Cannibals in Africa have rituals, so do jungle people in Borneo, Malaya and China, (did you see the film, "The Lost Continent"?). Catholics have rituals, so do Buddhists, Moslems, Boy Scouts and the Knights of Columbus.

And to say that "we must educate people to have loyalty to values of deep human implications—but not on the basis of ritual," shows a lack of understanding of Judaism and of ritual.

JUDAISM has been a forerunner in teaching kindness, morality, the sanctity of life itself. And it taught these values long before Dr. MacIver was born.

And for a sociologist to discount ritual seems very odd to me—it indicates an unfamiliarity with human nature.

SPEAKING generally, Jewish ritual life will not die. It has outlived many glamorous and flamboyant civilizations. Its longevity is due to its being based on those very values which Dr. MacIver thinks it does not know.

TWO COLLEGE STUDENTS OFFER DEFENSE OF JEWISH FRATERNITIES, SORORITIES

• Editor, Jewish POST and OPINION:

I WOULD like to answer your challenge to Rabbi Bookstaber in your editorial of July 5 concerning college fraternities and sororities.

You first say that the one charge that cannot be defended about fraternity life is that they divide Jew from Jew. I agree they do divide, but they divide college men into groups of homogenous, similar interests. They do not divide Jew from Jew or Jew against Jew. And the choosing of the membership of these groups is done by the members themselves. What could be more democratic? The very basic principle of our democratic government is that the people have the freedom to make their own choice. Is the college man to be denied his right to choose his own friends?

Your second charge is that the choosing of members for these groups is made on the basis of false values. You then cited an incident at the University of Illinois to support your position. I spoke to one of the girls who was among the six involved and I asked her what had happened. What was printed about the incident was not a complete or accurate account of what happened. Furthermore, I believe that if you will check further into the matter you will probably find that the girls who were given invitations to join were not daughters of the wealthiest persons.

THESE GIRLS were chosen because the sorority felt that they were suited to their group. Assuming what happened was completely true, I cannot believe that you can honestly picture this as typical of the entire fraternity system. I do not deny that these incidents happened, but I do say they are isolated cases. Fraternities do not pretend to be perfect. With over a million members, can you not expect occasional blemishes on their record?

To the other charge that girls who are left out suffer terribly I would like to cite a conversation I had with several girls who are in a sorority at Ohio State. We were discussing the probable effects of a new ruling which deferred rushing until the second quarter of school. The major fear these girls had was that the freshmen after living in the dorms for several months would see that sorority was not necessary, contrary to what they had previously thought. This could hardly be true if there is this desolate feeling at Ohio State that you say is present at every school with fraternities and sororities.

To your last challenge to Rabbi Bookstaber to defend the system I would like to quote several people on their thoughts on fraternities:

"For whatever I might be able to do, both within and without the fraternity circle, I could not in any sense properly compensate for what my fraternity has done for me; I have found practically all of my intimate friends within it... and from it I have derived imperishable ideals of conduct." — Herman B. Wells, President, Indiana University.

"The forces that have been greatest in my life have been God and the college fraternity that molded me." — Thomas R. Marshall, Vice-President of the United States.

MARV MITCHELL

• Editor, Jewish POST and OPINION:

I have just read the editorial in The Jewish POST of July 5 entitled "We Challenge the Rabbi."

I have attended the University of Illinois for three years and am a member of a Jewish sorority. I see in your article that six girls from a Midwestern community were asked to give the annual incomes of their fathers. To my knowledge this has never occurred at the University of Illinois.

THE GIRLS in the sororities have no knowledge whatsoever of the financial status of the "rushes" and what is more, we care less. The girls who are pledged to the sororities are chosen for their high school activities and grades, personality, personal appearance and leadership ability, so you see, we do not choose on your so-called "false values." I know of sorority girls who use the university loan service, and sorority loan service, in order to help pay for their education. This in itself should show that we do not care one iota how much money the fathers have.

It takes no issue with your other arguments against sororities and fraternities, although I personally believe that the advantages of being a member of a fraternal group outweigh the disadvantages at a school the size of the University of Illinois. Obviously, the capacity of a sorority house limits the size of its membership.

However, there is no reason why a girl who is not accepted into a sorority cannot matriculate at the university, anyway. There are various "independent" Jewish houses and dormitories where girls such as these live and they have not suffered deprivation and ostracism.

I feel that you are doing the University of Illinois a gross injustice by not looking into your facts more carefully before printing such an erroneous statement. Articles such as these frighten Jewish girls into not attending the University of Illinois where we have one of the largest Jewish populations of any state university and where we have done an excellent job in promoting goodwill between Gentile and Jew.

WHAT FOODS THESE MORSELS BE

Spices Are Variety of Life in Tropical (Summer) Dishes

By SARAH LEIBER

When the weather gets warm we begin to understand the exotic spiciness of food served in the tropics and other warm places. The body requires extra fluids, and to stimulate the thirst as well as to supply the extra salt to replace what is lost in perspiration, foods should be salted more heavily than usual. Our appetites tend to be more finicky, too. All in all, the kitchen kinstler has to be more ingenious than ever, comes the good old summer time.

Sarah

This isn't as hard as you might think. I remember once asking a visiting sabra about food differences and traditions in Israel. She told me that each of the national groups had brought along regional food tastes from the land of origin. "But of course," she said, "we have adapted them to Israeli needs. We all spice the food more than they did in the old country."

For our own summer adaptations we needn't spice things more highly, but should flavor them more ingeniously. A surprising taste lift will encourage the eaters to relish the meal. Even the most accustomed family foods, like hamburger, for instance, may be given a gourmet flavor and new zest with a little imagination. And when you serve, don't forget that all important element, eye appeal. Someone has called it Vitamin I!

I recently prepared two meals in one simple operation. The family called them both very successful. Maybe you'll like the idea, too.

TWO CHICKEN DINNERS

- 2 3-lb. broiling or frying chickens, cut up
- 2 stalks celery, left whole
- 1 onion, peeled and left whole
- 2 carrots, scraped and left whole
- 2 tsps. salt
- pepper to taste
- pinch of marjoram
- pinch of ginger
- water
- pie crust

Clean the chicken. Place in pressure saucepan, or large pot. Add the vegetables. If preparing in the pressure cooker add two cups water. Cover, set control at 10 and cook according to the directions for your cooker for 20 minutes. Let vent and cool normally. If cooking in regulation pot, cover with water and cook until very tender, about one hour. When the chicken is cool enough to handle, remove from the pot. Discard vegetables. Strain the broth. Taste, and adjust seasonings. If there is more than three cups of broth, cook slowly to reduce. Take the white meat off the bones, cut into cubes, or shred. Place in an oiled glass serving dish. Pour over concentrated broth. Place in the refrigerator for twenty-four hours or until jelled. Serve garnished with olives, tomatoes and greens.

Remove the dark meat from the bones. Place in a casserole or baking dish. Add a little broth and a cupful of cooked vegetables. (Left overs are good for this) Place in a 350 degree oven for 20 minutes. Meanwhile prepare a pie crust. When the chicken and vegetables are hot, place the crust on top of the baking dish. Prick with a fork, and slash to permit the steam to escape. Return to the oven and bake at 450 degrees 15 minutes or until the crust is brown. Each recipe serves 4 to 6.

PIE CRUST

- ¾ cup vegetable shortening
- ½ cup boiling water
- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tsp. salt

Place the shortening in a large mixing bowl. Pour in the hot water and beat with a fork until the consistency of whipped cream. Add the flour and salt, and stir with a teaspoon until a ball of dough is formed. Roll out at once on a floured board or waxed paper. This crust is enough for two 8 or 9-inch crusts. When making the chicken pot pie, the remaining dough may be rolled out and placed in a greased pie pan and baked as a shell for future use.

VEGETABLE SALAD WITH PAPRIKA DRESSING

- 2 medium onions, thinly sliced
- vinegar, salt and pepper to taste
- 3 carrots, diced or thinly sliced
- 1 bunch radishes, thinly sliced
- 2 cucumbers, peeled and cut into cubes
- 1 large avocado, sliced and dipped in lemon juice
- 2 tomatoes, diced
- 1 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
- 1 tsp. paprika

Pour boiling water over the sliced onions and let stand 5 minutes. Drain. Cover with vinegar and season with salt and pepper. Let stand in the refrigerator until thoroughly chilled. At serving time, arrange the vegetables on a bed of salad greens. Place the dressing in the center. Serve thoroughly chilled. Vegetables may be mixed with the dressing if desired.

Serves 6.

WOMEN'S VIEWPOINT

The Professor Just Doesn't Like Gals

By HELEN COHEN

AN ESPECIALLY harsh dig at womankind in general is credited to the lips of one of the professors in Time magazine listed as retiring this spring from American colleges. Economist Mandell Morton Bober of Lawrence College, Wisconsin, is noted, says Time, for his iconoclastic quotations, such as "Once we went to market with money in pocket and came home with goods in basket; now we go with money in basket and come home with goods in pocket." What he thinks about women might be judged from his statement, "If every man carried his cross, mighty few women would walk."

Say, professor, what female made life miserable for you?

THIS MIGHT be a good time to talk about why some people don't marry. It seems some bachelors remain that way, according to Dr. Jacob Friedman of New York, as quoted in Today's Health, because of unconscious phobias about marriage. "They delude themselves with irrelevant reasons such as marriage being too much responsibility, or the loss of freedom, or they had once been deceived by a woman, or a belief that women are untrustworthy or too demanding, or by setting standards too high in seeking a wife."

Oh, but the men aren't the only ones with phobias. Dr. Friedman lists those holding some women back: "Fear of pregnancy or attachment to a parent, or fear of infidelity by a future husband, guilt over childhood sexual activities, having been jilted, and desire for a wealthy husband."

"With psychotherapy to help them understand the real cause of their conflict, many can solve their problems and marry happily," is the doctor's stand.

I'D SAY Dr. Friedman might be letting himself in for trouble with that approach. Supposing he convinced a bachelor that his fears were ungrounded and the trusting soul up and married a demanding woman (who can tell beforehand), then where would the doctor be?

Even so, Professor Bober, some women may be bad medicine, but is it fair to hold that against the whole feminine sex?

of June 28 is disturbed about the way most Jewish activity closes down for the summer. "... there is virtually a total suspension of Jewish life on the American scene," is its view. "... the temporary cessation of those activities and concerns that tie man to his community, his religion, his people. The effect of such a suspension is that it nullifies many of the achievements of the year, and handicaps the continuity of Jewish life."

The editorial writer then lists as a few steps in the right direction: The Adult Education Institutes of B'nai B'rith, the summer camps with Jewish content, educational trips to Israel sponsored by the Jewish Agency and the National Jewish Social workers.

MAY I humbly submit another institution which continues full steam ahead, even during the hottest days of summer. The Anglo-Jewish weeklies throughout the country.

And speaking of that weekly deadline coming around regularly 52 times a year, the last week in July marks the 10th year for Women's Viewpoint.

I think I'll let you eavesdrop on a conversation on the subject between my mother, who was up on a recent visit, and myself:

"Well, it's almost 10 years since I got started on the column," I mentioned. "About time I retired."

"Oh, no," was her dismay reaction. Then she brightened and added, "I bet you couldn't stop writing even if you tried."

JUST SHOWS you how difficult it is to put yourself in someone else's shoes. "You have it backwards, mother," I smiled wryly. "It's usually a toss-up each week as to whether I can go on. Quite an effort."

Just letting you know, too, in case you're like my ma and think columns are ground out automatically. Maybe you won't take me so much for granted now either.

Jewish Scientist Gets UNESCO Post

By LILLIAN LEVY
Washington Bureau Chief
National Jewish POST and OPINION

WASHINGTON D. C. — Secretary John Foster Dulles has appointed Professor David G. Mandelbaum, distinguished anthropologist at present on the faculty of the University of California, to the U. S. National Commission for the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

PROFESSOR Mandelbaum's appointment raises the present Commission strength within four of the 100 member limit put upon it by Congress. The function of the Commission is to advise the State Department on UNESCO affairs and to act as liaison between the American people and UNESCO.

An authority on cultural development in South Asia, Dr. Mandelbaum has served as staff member of the famous American Museum of Natural History. He has traveled extensively, and spent considerable time in India, where he did special research on village life. He has also done extensive field work among American Indian tribes. A native of Chicago, where he was born 46 years ago, Dr. Mandelbaum was at one time a member of the faculty of the University of Minnesota.

ONE OF THE busiest members of Congress is the junior Senator from New York, Republican Jacob K. Javits, who is in the forefront of the fighting for liberalized immigration laws, increased foreign aid, civil liberties, to name just a few of the causes with which he is associated actively.

Fighting to amend the Senate's famed Rule 22, by which those opposed to civil rights legislation have been able to filibuster it to death, Javits has recommended that the Rule which now requires two-thirds of the entire Senate to cut off debate be changed to permit a majority of the Senate to terminate debate after 15 days.

Among the liberals supporting Javits are Senators Paul Douglas (D. Ill.), Irving M. Ives (R. N. Y.), Clifford P. Case (R. N. J.), and most of the Northern Senators.

MRS. MORRIS CAFRITZ, whose husband is one of this city's most brilliant financiers, and a most generous contributor to UJA, is sometimes seen in very strange company. Recently she was a guest at a party given by "The Silverfish," a club made up mostly of press attaches from mostly Arab countries where she posed for a picture with Mohamed Habib, Egyptian Press Attache. Why the name "Silverfish?" As one of the Arab press attaches who started the club explained, the silverfish is a bug that eats paper and the members of this club do that figuratively with the countless number of words they use to consume paper.

SECRETARY DULLES was delayed for over half an hour from leaving for a brief holiday last week end by Azzam Pasha, personal representative of King Saud and Secretary General of the Arab League.

When he emerged from his visit with the Secretary, which lasted over one and a half hours, Azzam Pasha refused to disclose the matters he had discussed with the Secretary. However, in questions put to him by the POST, Saud's representative declared:

(1) That the delivery of the Red submarines to Egypt contributed to "peace" in the Middle East because "the stronger" the Arabs are, the stronger the possibility for peace; (Note: Eisenhower, at a press conference, termed these Red submarines "Unhelpful.")

(2) He doesn't believe any Arab country, "including Syria," is going communist; and the influence of any foreign power in the Middle East is detrimental and not justified; and, he added that he wasn't referring to Russian influence but to British, French and Jewish, as well.

(3) THE ARABS are united even though Jordan has severed diplomatic relations with Egypt and Saudi Arabia has protested against Syrian propaganda against his king. These are just "family quarrels" and he predicted they would be forgotten in the next three months.

(4) The reason the Arabs won't sit down to discuss their differences with Israel is because "Arabs are honest people. Why sit down when it will come to nothing?"

AZZAM PASHA also said that Saudi Arabia will join with Egypt in protesting Arab rights in Aqaba and Suez. In the heat of his indignation over Israel's shipping using Aqaba, the Pasha disclosed that he had expressed his country's disagreement with the U.S. on its stand regarding Aqaba. He declared that these waters are "presently being used against Arab wishes and against international law."

Asked if his country would join with Egypt in a fighting war against Israel to prevent Israel ships in Aqaba, Azzam said, "We are not here to preach force."

THE LITERARY REPORTER

HISTORY OF JEWS FROM MACCABEES TO COLUMBUS

THE NEW JEWISH HISTORY, by Mamie G. Gamoran, $2.75 (UAHC).

Book Two of Mrs. Gamoran's history ambitiously, but most capably, carries the student from the Maccabees to Columbus.

Jewish ideals, Jewish spiritual strength and achievement—every positive and imposing element in the people's history—are conveyed to the young reader in a fluent and flexible style rarely discovered in this textbook genus.

There are poetic quotations, illustrations by Bruno Forst, pedagogic helps, a reading list (which has the good taste to include three of the reviewer's juveniles, and an index.

REFERENCES to early Christianity are restrained; there is no special pleading for modern sectarianism; and the text is in the main acceptable to the generality. A well-planned, well-advised, well-written work, in the fine tradition of the Gamorans.

JEWISH QUESTION AND ANSWER BOOK, by William R. Blumenthal, $3.75 (Fellowship for Jewish Culture, Los Angeles 36).

The compiler of this quiz volume was fortified by a lifelong interest in his people and its literature, by an excellent choice of reference works, and by a cultivated discrimination. In every case the answers are on opposing pages, to be covered during cerebration, avoiding the see-back-of-book nuisance. There are sections on the Bible, on Jewish lore (including such esoterica as firsts in American history), on the holidays, and on jests and curiosia. (Not the best is "Where was Noah when the lights went out?" "In d'ark.")

Probably no one could answer all the queries correctly, but the game is fascinating, and much knowledge is to be acquired by playing it. Strongly recommended.

JUDAISM OR JEWISH NATIONALISM, by Elmer Berger, $3 (Bookman).

Since the title of this book is in itself a falsification, it is hardly necessary to comment that all the replies to the completely justified and documented charges against the Council are in themselves false and tendentious.

Berger is not remotely as good a Jew or American as most of those he despises and assails. It is time he gave up his factitious arguments to bolster an untenable position, and acknowledged to himself that perhaps the 98 per cent he differs from, including in all probability all his forebears, are right.

ON THE CORNER, by N. Angle, $3.00 (Exposition).

For 20 years this Jewish newsboy watched his neighbors and clients from a vantage point, noting their vagaries and virtues and sins. The incidents he records, in his unprofessional style, may serve as a plot for many a novel and short story.

FROM THE DARK TOWER, by Ernst Pawel, $3.75 (Macmillan).

The hero of this novel is an insurance executive named Abe Rogoff. The author would have us believe that the death of a superior so altered his character that he found it necessary to fight his employers, his community, and even his country's best interests, as a means of self-expression. The motivation for this kind of suicide is never apparent, although parts of the story are impressive. There is a synagogue which Rogoff deserts, and a peculiar rabbi who puts up with the hero's idiocies. It would have been better for

ANTI-SEMITIC UNIVERSITY

In all our experience we've never heard of such dastardly anti-Semitism as that evidenced in the admissions practice of a certain prominent university, which at this point we do not intend to name.

In city after city, figures seem to show that if nine high school graduates applied, and two were Jewish, the seven non-Jews were admitted, while the two Jews were rejected. Investigation showed that inevitably the Jewish applicants ranked higher scholastically.

This story may break soon, and we're sure the university will suffer in the esteem of the public when the facts are revealed. What is more, public opinion will force the midwestern school to change its practices.

But if an outstanding institution of learning can be guilty of such reprehensible actions, maybe others are just as brazenly anti-Semitic. So if you know of any cases, perhaps in your own family, where deserving students seemed to have been rejected because of the one reason, their Jewishness, will you please drop us a line?

WAGE EARNERS AGAIN

Following up on our editorials in connection with the desperate need for wage earners' synagogues, there are two observations which are pertinent.

Reform and Conservatism are putting up a wall which keeps the Jewish masses from affiliating with them, when because their dues are so high, they make it impossible for the man who works for someone else to afford membership.

The second observation is along the same lines, but in connection with the by now roundly criticized mushroom synagogues. These are the synagogues which spring up all over our large cities at the time of the High Holy Days.

The mushroom synagogues are in effect the wage-earners' synagogues. They inevitably are Orthodox for reasons already stated, and they permit the wage earner to pray at the High Holy Days at a minimum cost.

We do not want to take the side of the wage earner without qualification, because the $100-a-year that is required to join a synagogue or temple, even the best of them, will hardly bankrupt anyone. But this civilization being what it is, Judaism will not overnight resume the centrality in the life of the Jew which it occupied formerly, and no mistake can be worse than to fail to estimate the people whom one wants to serve.

In another age, and another day, Jews will sacrifice in order to pay the dues required for congregation membership. Today, hundreds of thousands of them either do not affiliate at all or they confine their worship to the High Holy Days and the mushroom synagogue.

THE FACTS OF LIFE

THE FACTS OF LIFE, those that are on the distasteful side, dictate that you show more consideration toward distant acquaintances and even your enemies, than to your friends. Your friends you take for granted, and have a right to. You don't worry whether they will take offense, because you know they will understand. But not your occasional acquaintances and your enemies. You are careful in the way in which you approach them, because you know that every move will be challenged and scrutinized.

That is why Ben-Gurion issued a special invitation to Lessing Rosenwald, who could be described as an enemy.

There are certainly many people much more worthy than Lessing Rosenwald who deserve, because of their life-long efforts for Israel, an invitation to visit the Jewish state, whether at the behest of Ben-Gurion or not. But they know that such invitations will not be forthcoming.

Rosenwald's trip to Israel was not wasted. Israel has a way of growing on one, and although the reaction of Mr. Rosenwald to his first enthusiasm was not long in setting in, his permanent attitude toward the Jewish state will inevitably have been changed because he saw Jews there who were everything he would like to be and cannot.

INSTEAD THEN, of parading his joy in Israel, Rosenwald sort of sublimates it by giving vent to his friendship and admiration not to Israel, but to the Jew who has done so much to see that there is a Jewish state—Ben-Gurion.

In time, almost everyone who can afford to travel, will have visited Israel. This, more than all the editorials and words ever written, will weld together the two great Jewish communities of this century, those of Israel and the United States.

The EDITOR'S CHAIR . . .

WE HARDLY EVER get a chance to spend the time with the men we love and admire that we would like to, and it is only by catch-as-catch-can, to use wrestling terminology, that we get to see some of the people for whom we have great affection and admiration.

So it was that the last time I saw Maxwell Abbell, whose death last week came as a shock, was in his office. I had a few minutes and walked in to say hello.

After we'd talked a while, Maxwell asked me what I had in mind. When I told him that I came in only to say hello and to chat a bit, he found it hard to believe, and something of a compliment. For, like all Jewish men in high stations, either in the Jewish or the general community, people come to see them when they want something. This is a debasement of the emotion of friendship, but the way Jewish life requires so many things these days, it is almost inevitable.

MAX, AS HIS FRIENDS called him, was one of the true leaders of the community. It is difficult to put the words together which would accurately describe him for those of you who didn't know him personally. All of us like to fit the people we meet into a certain pre-arranged niche, and from then on we recognize them as much by the niche as for themselves.

Max, of course, was generous, and gave to all positive Jewish causes. His interest in Zionism was second to that of no other Jewish leader.

Perhaps it was the absence from his make-up of continual attack on other Jewish leaders which was the hallmark of his personality. Chicago has another just like him in Ben Harris.

THIS DOESN'T MEAN he wasn't a fighter for any cause in which he believed, but it means that he was a man who stood on his own two feet and didn't need to bolster his ego by attacking others.

He told me, more or less confidentially at the time, that he quit the chairmanship of the government's committee on discrimination in employment because he couldn't see himself doing this work while the United States took such an ignoble position in the case of the Dharan Air Base in Saudi Arabia from which United States Jewish servicemen were barred.

WHEN HE TOLD YOU something, you could assume that it was accurate, that there was no ulterior motive behind it, and that he was telling it to you because he wanted you to know about it.

In line with this, when he went on a trip, and he made a number of them to Israel, to South America, etc., in the past few years, he would multigraph a long and graphic account of what he saw, which he would then distribute to his friends. I remember his account of his visit to Spain and the relics of its once-great Jewish community, as graphic a first-hand description as any of the many historical pieces I've read on that country.

It is more or less trite to say that he will be missed. Everyone has some attributes of greatness, and someone always misses those who are called to the Great Beyond. But it will be most difficult to replace Maxwell Abbell, and one of these days, ask me to tell you how he made thousands of dollars for his friends, including the Jewish Theological Seminary of America and a number of rabbis, by investing their money prudently.

We have it from Mike and Liz, whose last names we can presume almost everybody in the U. S. happens to know, that the matter of their Jewish marriage ceremony is a personal, private affair.

We'd suggest that this pretty well establishes that there was no Jewish ceremony.

And also, we'd suggest to both Mike and Liz that if the editors decided that what Mike and Liz did was their own business, and therefore didn't make good newspaper copy, the first to complain would be Mike and Liz.

MATOS: There Are No Small Stories in the Bible

RECENTLY A REVIEWER said of a book that the writer had told a small story superbly well. The Bible authors were not of this breed. They were not interested in small stories. They wrote in the grand manner. Naturally, time and reverence and the power of being the Book for centuries have added to the stature of the Bible. The patina of ages has given the material a value beyond its intrinsic worth, as antique qualities do to all substances. But the intrinsic worth is there. It does not rub off with the patina. The Bible authors wrote deliberately for eternity. They gave small matters a universal context.

The Sedra Matos speaks of the validity of oaths—oaths taken by minors and by women, a rather minor type of ordinance on the face of it. But the validity of promises was important in a pre-contractual society. Therefore, this value had to be placed among the divine virtues in the safe deposit vault of Heaven. The Haftara from Jeremiah reminds us that the Lord demonstrated to the prophet when first He called him: "Thou hast well seen; for I watch over My word to perform it."

BUT THE GRAND MANNER, this eternity stance, does not mean a windy, airy fairy, soaring into soft meanings and vague intimations. Consider the tough instruction of Moses to the military leaders in regard to destroying the adult Midianites. It is primitive and barbaric in its stark unmitigated cruelty. But it was realistic! To have assumed that the tribes of Israel, so recently won from paganism, could have absorbed the Canaanites would have spelt the doom of Israel. Moses and the authors who wrote his story preferred to stain their reputation to immolating the seed of Abraham amidst the nations. They preferred to forego the adulation of uncompromising humanists, Ethical Culturists, liberal cosmopolites, Bahaists, Christian Scientists, pacifists, and the followers of Swami Yoganandi to ending the experiment of a chosen people.

The followers of Ichud, the One World enthusiasts, and the Swiss Guard of Mr. Dag Hammarskjöld who believe that present-day Israel can absorb 700,000 Arab refugees have no stomach for Moses' bitter medicine. Still the realism of Moses is a necessary counterpart of the vagaries of the Internationalists. Without the Mosaic realists there would be no nations to federate, no group cultures nor collective values to serve as the foundation stones of the edifice of a united mankind when the time is ripe. Those who force an idea before its time are often as discouraging to real progress as those who use gradualism as a cloak for reaction. The genius of true statesmanship is in the ability to gauge the proper preconditions of purposeful change.

THIS GENIUS MOSES HAD. It was developed and sharpened on a host of reasonable decisions, practical compromises, workable mediations. Consider how, in the Sedra, he settled the matter of the tribes of Gad, Reuben and the half-tribe of Manasseh, who hankered after the rich grazing land on this side of the Jordan. Moses allowed these tribes to build fortified places for the women and children and sheepcotes for the sheep on condition that the able-bodied men march to help liberate the country beyond the Jordan. Moses would tolerate no free-loaders, nor would he hold to a rigid rule in the face of practicalities.

IT IS THIS TEMPER which gives the Bible the authenticity of common sense. It insists on meeting the given conditions before any leap into the dark. One world at a time, the kingdom of earth before the kingdom of heaven. That is why it is a sure rock in time of trouble, a certain haven for the disillusioned returnees of the Pied Piper faiths, the saving remnants of those who come back naked and despoiled from the Fata Morganas, the Lost Atlantises, the Ultima Thules of the starry-eyed who are often allergic to the mud and rock, the thorns and thistles of earth.

Abe Stark Proves No Mean Grandstander

By GEORGE VASS

Vass

IT WOULD BE a singular omission, and indeed a regrettable one, if the role of Abe Stark, president of the New York city council, at the congressional hearings on baseball, were ignored.

Stark, a dapper, diminutive and outspoken gentleman, provided some of the most sparkling, if not inspired, dialogue audible at the House Judiciary sub-committee's hearing, held under the chairmanship of Rep. Emmanuel Celler (D.N.Y.). In the manner of a latter-day Don Quixote he tilted fearlessly at the windmill of Brooklyn Dodger obfuscation regarding the possibility of the Bums' flight to Los Angeles.

No charge was too broad, no accusation too ridiculous, no proposal too flighty for Stark to launch at Walter O'Malley, president of the Dodgers.

NOT ONLY was O'Malley betraying the loyal fans of Brooklyn by considering the move to L. A., said Stark, but also, he hinted darkly, genial Walter was plotting a "worse monopoly."

"It is the corrupting alliance between baseball and pay television. What sort of Frankenstein monster are we creating which today can reach out and threaten the right of the people of New York to watch their own baseball teams?"

Stark was referring to the added inducement offered O'Malley in L. A. by the possibility of televising Dodger games over a closed pay-as-you-watch system, a method not feasible in the near future in the New York area.

"It is my belief a franchise morally belongs to the people of a community. It is not the personal property of any individual to be removed at the slightest whim," Stark declared.

NOT CONTENT to lambast O'Malley and the pay television folks, Stark also took a swipe at the mayors of Los Angeles and San Francisco. Their efforts to lure a major league team are "a shocking example of organized, officially sanctioned piracy," he charged.

No scientific method being available to determine how much of all this poppycock is motivated by Stark's sentiments as a Brooklyn fan on the one hand and his instincts as a politician on the other hand, the judgment has to be left to one's mental processes.

But it might be worth pondering upon whether the population of the New York area—or any other, for that matter—has a "right" to view for free, as Stark professes to believe, a commercial enterprise such as the Brooklyn Dodger baseball team.

Whether your answer to that question is yes or no, you'll have to admit this much—Abe Stark is, to put it in baseball terms, strictly a "grandstander."

IT HAS BEEN quite a while since Morrie Aronovich, the old Phillies' Red Sox outfielder has worn a glove but it's doubtful if he'll ever forget the catch he made with his face.

Playing for the Reds in 1940, Morrie was all set to grab a fly ball when he was struck in the face by a flying hot dog, roll, mustard, etc. It had been thrown from the stands and Morrie vowed that if he ever laid his hands on the thrower, he would break him in two.

Several years later, Aronovich, now an infantryman in New Guinea, sat in the grass beside a dusty road, enjoying a break in the march.

"Hey, aren't you Morrie Aronovich?" the soldier next to him suddenly asked. Morrie nodded yes.

"Well, do you remember the time that a guy socked you in the face with a hot dog at Crosley Field? Well, I'm the guy."

Morrie was so astonished that he forgot his vow, and the two shook hands.

SPORTS SHORTS . . . When Dodger Coach Jake Pitler was thrown out in Milwaukee recently it was the first time the Brooklyn baseball aide had been banished from a game in five years. . . . The Norwalk (Conn.) Jewish center recently presented an award to Yankee outfielder Hank Bauer, a speaker at its 15th annual award dinner, for his devotion to sports, good sportsmanship and heroic record as a United States Marine. . . . Two Girl Sprinters Vie In Maccabiad

NEW YORK (NJP) — Two young girl sprinters, one from Canada and one from England, are expected to put on quite a duel at the Fifth World Maccabiah Games in Israel in September.

Freyda Berman, 15, of Vancouver, has already done 100 yards in 11.4, and has bettered the winning time in three events turned in in the last Maccabiad.

Debra Turner of London, just 16, has sprinted 100 meters in 12.3, almost the exact equivalent of Freyda's time for 100 yards.

Another feminine star to compete is Israel's Ruth Rachman, who recently set an Israeli shot put record of 11.57 meters.

Olympions Honor Sam Mosberg

NEW YORK (NJP) — Sam Mosberg, of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been re-elected vice-chairman of the United States Olympians, New York chapter, composed of American athletes who competed in past Olympic Games.

Mosberg, who won the lightweight boxing crown at the Antwerp Olympics of 1920, was honored with the assignment of American flag bearer at the closing ceremonies of the World Maccabiah Games in Israel in 1953.

Flam Top Seeded

CHICAGO (NJP)—Defending champion Herb Flam of Beverly Hills is top-seeded in this week's national clay court tennis championships. Seeded fifth is Grant Golden of near-by Wilmette, Ill. The tournament ends Sunday.

Judy Frank Wins N. Y. Golf Crown

NEW YORK (NJP)—Twenty-two-year-old Judy Frank, who took the metropolitan championship earlier this year, captured the New York state women's golf crown this week at Briar Hall.

Playing for the first time in the tourney, Miss Frank walloped a five-time champion, Mrs. Reinert M. Torgerson. The match was played in intermittent rains.

Marcus, Schapiro In Net Finals

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (Special)—John Marcus of Great Neck, L.I., won the boys' singles in the New York state tennis tournament, defeating Joel Schapiro of Roslyn Heights, L.I., 6-1, 6-4. Marcus won the doubles with Vic Neiderhoffer of Brooklyn, beating Schapiro and New York's Henry Steinglass.

British Sprinter Cracks Record

LONDON (NJP)—Dave Segal, England's hope in the Maccabi Games, demonstrated his fitness last week with a 30.4 clocking for 300 yards, eclipsing the English standard. This mark, only six-tenths off Herb McKenley's world mark, established the young airman as a prime contender for Maccabi sprint laurels. He recently took the RAF 100 and 220 sprint crowns.

US Jews Win Writers' Awards

NEW YORK (WNS)—All of the winners of the 17th annual award of the Louis LaMed Foundation for the best Yiddish and Hebrew books published in 1956 are American residents. The Yiddish winners were Jacob Glatstein for his collected poems, "All My Toil," and Isaac Bashevis-Singer for his memoirs study, "My Father's Courthouse." Dr. Shimon Bernstein, who wrote an anthology of medieval Hebrew poetry, "By the Rivers of Spain," and Dr. Meyer Waxman, who wrote "In the Paths of Hebrew Literature and Essays," were the Hebrew winners. Winners received awards of $500 each.

Flam Whips Savitt

GLEN COVE, N. Y. (NJP) — Herb Flam, U. S. Davis Cup ace, beat Dick Savitt, who doesn't want to be a Davis Cup ace, in the all-Jewish final of the annual Nassau Bowl invitation tennis tourney here this week, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2. It was Savitt's first grass court appearance since last year's nationals, and only his second in five years.

Knesset Endorses Relations With Germany

JERUSALEM (NJP) — The Knesset by a large majority this week endorsed the principle of establishing normal relations with West Germany.

Prime Minister Ben-Gurion told the Knesset "We should take into account not the Germany of yesterday, but the Germany of today." He said West Germany was active in working toward European unity, especially in creating a common market and an atom pool. "Israel needs bonds with Europe," Ben-Gurion said. He declared public opinion had to be prepared for establishment of relations with Bonn.

Wyatt Earp's Tombstone Stolen From Resting Place in Jewish Cemetery

By BERNARD LIEBES

SAN FRANCISCO (NJP)—The tombstone of Wyatt Earp, famed gunman of the Wild West, was stolen last week from its resting place in the Jewish Hills of Eternity Memorial Cemetery.

Authorities suspect the 500-pound granite stone is en route to Tombstone, Arizona, where the frontier marshal's fast exploits with the six shooter made him the most feared man in the Old West.

The Tombstone Restoration Commission has wanted Earp's ashes buried in the city's Boothill Cemetery, but relatives here opposed the move. The theft was news to Tombstone officials, who promised to return the stone if it showed up there.

It was in Tombstone that Earp made his last "play" as the fastest gunman west of the Rockies, slaying the three killers of his brother in gun duels.

The legendary shooter eventually came to California where he got into real estate and became wealthy. In the 1890's he married Josephine Sarah Marcus, daughter of a San Francisco pioneer store owner.

EARP DIED in 1929 at age 81 and his wife had his ashes interred in the family plot at the Jewish cemetery, located at Colma, a community bordering on San Francisco. Josephine died in 1944. Her ashes are next to Earp's.

Wyatt Earp is now a household name throughout the nation, thanks to television, where his exploits are dramatized weekly on a national network.

ISRAEL LABOR PARTIES ARE CALLED 'FEUDAL'

TEL AVIV (NJP)—"The State party, Dr. Joseph Serlin, member of Knesset, said here last week: He added:

"The 'Histadrut' is a feudal character of the labor parties," former minister and leader of the General Zionist every domain."
